About the artwork

"Beirut", by Fadi Balhawan, reflects the rich and layered identity of the city across 6000 years of history. Through composed handwritten text, the piece brings together literary, historical, and spiritual references that resonate deeply with Beirut and its people.

The composition includes references to the first law school established in the city, passages by Nadia Tueni, and passages from "Lebnan In Haka" by Said Akl. Scriptures from the Matteo Bible intertwine with verses by Nizar Qabbani and Mohammad el Maouz, alongside writings by young poets who have expressed their own visions of Beirut.

By merging these voices together, the artwork becomes a visual tapestry of memory, poetry, faith, and history. The layered text reflects the complexity of Beirut itself, a city shaped by resilience, culture, and generations of stories that continue to echo through time.
