About the artwork

In this body of work, Dahoul's protagonist's features haunt us with their presence, looking straight into the void, and swallowing us through the darkness. Completely aware of life's struggles, conveying agony, loss, and chagrin. Meanwhile, Dahoul emphasizes that he is not a pessimist; he merely documents the current state of affairs. Although initially subjective and internally stemming, Safwan thrives on painting the world practically. While the faces may reference familiar fallen places and memories, Dahoul emphasizes the universality of his artistic message, that human torment transcends time and geography.
